

THREE SMALL SUBMARINES SAID TO ACCOMPANY GERMAN RAIDER IN SOUTH ATLANTIC OPERATIONS

New Style Submersibles With Rover and They Do Scout Duty.

IS SIGHTED OFF BRAZIL

Strange Vessel With Four Smoke-Stacks, Painted Black, Thought to be Raider: Report She Has Col-
apsible Stacks: Change of Intervals.

By Associated Press.
RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 20.—The Journal Pequeno of Pernambuco asserts that it has information that the German raider is accompanied by three small submarines. These submarines are said to be six meters in length and of an entirely new type.
Members of the crews of ships sunk
by the raider and who have been held prisoner on board her are quoted as saying that the submarines constantly
leave the mother ship and reappear
after short intervals apparently
doing scouting duty.

They say the raider has a speed of 20 knots but slows down during the night.

RAIDER REPORTED SEEN OFF COAST OF BRAZIL.
BUENOS AIRES, Argentine Republic, Jan. 20.—According to press dispatches from Rio Janeiro, a strange
steamship with four smokestacks
painted black has been sighted off
Cape Brazil, running at high speed.
Word of this vessel was brought by
the men on a steamship which arrived yesterday at Bat. Brazil, who say they saw the steamer.

The German raider which has been operating in the South Atlantic is reported to be equipped with collapsible
smokestacks, the number visible being changed at intervals to disguise
the identity of the vessel.

SHIPPING CIRCLES SAY OF SEVERAL RAIDERS

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The warning
sent out by wireless to vessels of the Entente Allies by the British authorities that the captured British merchantman H. T. H. had been converted into a German commerce raider was pointed to today by local shipping
authorities as tending to prove that the German raiders are at large in the Atlantic.
It was asserted that a steamship had been sunk south of the equator within eight days after the raider had been sighted about 600 miles west of Portland.

For any vessel to have covered the distance in that time would have been an impossibility. In the discussion of what vessels possibly could be supplying the German raiders, the peculiar actions of Cape Hatteras of the Portuguese steamer Fario, a former German vessel, were recalled. The Fario formerly was the Galatia.
The vessel, it appears, was interned
in Portugal when the war started, was seized by the Portuguese government
when the latter declared war against Germany, and under the name of Fario
was put into the merchant trade of Portugal. The American tank steamer Succosa which arrived here Christmas day reported that off Cape Hatteras
she sighted the Fario which steamed
across the tanker's bow then circled
and recrossed and disappeared.
According to the Succosa officers,
the Fario appeared next day and repeated
the performance, neither time displaying any signal to explain her mysterious action. The Fario put into Newport News for coal and sailed from there December 23 since when she had not been reported.

RECORDS SHOW 3 AMERICANS AMONG CREW OF YARROWDALE

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—Three Americans were members of the crew of the British steamer Yarrowdale captured
by the German raider and taken into
a German port by a prize crew, according to the record of the British con-sulate here. Disputes from Berlin
last night said that the Yarrowdale had brought in 459 prisoners, crews from other captured ships, among them 193
subjects from neutral nations, but no
mention was made of there being any Americans among them.

COMPLICATED QUESTION RAISED IF AMERICANS WERE IN CREWS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The German admiralty's statement that neutral subjects in the crews of vessels
captured by the German raider in the South Atlantic "have been removed
as prisoners of war" will raise a complicated question, if any Americans
are among them.

The whole question hangs on whether
an armed merchant vessel in a war
vessel and the xul between this country and Germany on that question is still unbridged.

Of course Americans on such ships
could be considered as prisoners of war only if the vessels were considered as war vessels.

Man and Wife Killed.

Mr. and Mrs. John Richardson of Hempfield slope.

ing to an Amsterdam dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company of London. General von Hindenburg is in

SALVATION ARMY TO HAVE A HOME

Captain Phelps and His Followers May Buy a Property on Pittsburg Street.

Negotiations are under way for the purchase of a property on South
Pittsburg street for a Salvation Army home. Captain L. N. Phelps and his followers have been working on the proposition for some time and will be ready to make some definite announcement soon.

Captain Phelps has been dickering
for a property on the east side of Pittsburg street just south of Brimstone corner. He also had negotiations under way at one time for the taking over of the Macomber house in case the lodge decided to relinquish
its hold on it. The Macombers, however, decided to keep the building for their own uses.

A campaign to raise $20,000, the estimated cost of the structure, is to be inaugurated. Captain Phelps says that he can raise this sum and provide
for the maintenance of the building.

Captain Phelps came here a year
ago on January 18 and he has succeeded in re-establishing the Salvation Army to its former standing after a loss of prestige when Captain Harrison, his predecessor, took up arms
against the ministers of the city.

FREIGHTER FIGHTS U-BOAT.

Merchant Vessel and Submarine Exchange Over 400 Shots.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—A "battle"
which lasted an hour and 40 minutes
between the freighter Lindenhal and a Teutonic submarine in the Mediterranean with nearly 400 shots exchanged between the two craft, was described by officers of the Linden-
hal upon her arrival here today from Naples.

The freighter came in so severely
shattered that she looked as if she had been in an explosion. Twenty-six shots from the U-boat hit her and one of the shells still protrudes from
the woodwork.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 20.—

The grand opera house here was burned

COUNTY TEACHERS DISCUSS TRUANCY

Dunbar Principal Brings Up Matter Which Brings Questions From Other Teachers.

Nearly fifty educators, principals,
and teachers, from all parts of Fayette county, met this morning in the high school building here, when the Fayette County Educational Association
held its second session of the year.

The morning session began shortly
after 9 o'clock with County Superintendent John S. Carroll presiding. Although the program, including addresses by prominent school men, was adhered to in a general way, a great part of the session was devoted to informal discussion of school problems
by all the teachers present.

Led by Superintendent Carroll, the
educators took up the truancy
law and its enforcement, which was talked by Principal A. E.
Lumber of Dunbar borough and
brought questions from Superintendent
S. P. Ashe of Connellsville and others.
The question of truancy was discussed from every angle; when an offer should be sent after a boy who is not in school, and when an officer
should not be sent, were the phases
of the question which seemed to interest the school men most. After Mr.
Lumber and Mr. Ashe had discussed
the subject for some time, Superintendent Carroll gave his interpretation
of the law, and the discussion passed
to other things.

This evening's program included
addresses by C. H. Culpitt, superintending principal of Washington and Jefferson townships; R. M. Radtall, Miss Alpha French and W. H. Martin. John W. Willard of the Uniontown high school, conducted the opening exercises. Miss Elizabeth Anderson sang
a solo.

The afternoon session began at 1:30 o'clock, with an address by Miss Helen
P. Marshall. Others on the program included Charles W. Baer and John W.
Willard, both of the Uniontown high school; J. T. King and J. C. Beaman,
speaking on problems of school life;
and Miss Marian Munson and William
P. Brooks, vocalists.

NEED LOTS OF GIRLS

Specify Silk Mill MayEnlarge If Female Labor Is Plentiful.

With more than one hundred applications already received the management of the Specialty Silk Mill,
whose factory is being erected on the West Side, is still after female labor.
The company will accept applicants
and should the present mill not be large enough to employ everyone an addition will be built to the factory.

The labor question is the only one that is bothering the owners of the factory. Agents with offers of girls that are available for the work are
scouring nearby towns and cities
visiting the girls and signing
them up if they are willing to be employed. In this manner over 100 applicants have been secured.

No office has been opened at the mill yet as the contractor has not yet turned over the building. One man who is in a position to know
said that if enough employees could be secured, he would not be surprised
if the silk mill company ordered the work of putting the addition up immediately. He also said that a second factory might be erected in this region if female labor proves plentiful enough to guarantee the work.

PLAN BIG TAX

Those of More Than $15,000.000 Would Be Taxed 15 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Profits of corporations and partnerships in excess of eight per cent of the capital
ization would be taxed eight per cent
and inheritance taxes would be raised
to produce $238,000,000 by a tentative
draft of the administration's revenue
bill awaiting consideration by the House ways and means committee
Monday.

A bond issue of $238,000,000 is also provided.

Exemptions from the excess profit
tax would apply to concerns having
not more than $5,000 profits annually,
to agricultural pursuits, and to in-
comes of professional men.

The rate on minimum inheritances
now taxable would be increased from 14 per cent and those of more than $15,000,000 would be taxed 15 per

Senate Members Will Oppose Omnibus Appropriation Measure.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Senate opponents of an omnibus bill building
bill were preparing today to marshal
their forces for the coming fight on the measure, which passed the House late yesterday carrying $338,000,000 for buildings, improvements or sites in cities and towns throughout the country.

The bill is certain to meet with strong opposition in the Senate and President Wilson has served notice
that he will veto it. The bill passed the House by a vote of 234 to 39 after a long and bitter fight. Opponents denounced it as "pork barrel" legisla-

RISBECK AND MOOSE PARTY, STUCK IN BIG SNOW DRIFT, SPEND NIGHT AT FARMHOUSE

John H. Risbeck, national director of the Loyal Order of Moose, accompanied by his secretary, William N.
Robson, and James H. Pasco and John H. Giles of his staff, who were in Connellsville on Wednesday night, arrived
in Pittsburg last evening after a thrilling night's experience. They ran into a 10-foot snow drift between Green-
burg and Mount Pleasant Thursday
night and had to seek shelter at a farmhouse.

The Risbeck party had been touring
through Fayette and Westmoreland
counties in a large automobile visiting
the Moose lodges in the various towns.
They left Connellsville on Thursday
afternoon, expecting to arrive in Pitsburg that evening, but when about half way between Mount Pleasant and Greensburg, after battling with heavy
snowdrifts all the way the automobile
stuck fast in a low place in the road
covered with about 10 feet of snow.

After a vain effort to extricate the machine the tourists found shelter in a neighboring farm house until morning, when their host summoned 10
farmers who released the automobile
after two hours' shovelling. Mr. Ris-
beck says that these farmers were of the "hardy Westmoreland type."

At the meeting of the Connellsville
Moose lodge attended by Mr. Risbeck, it was decided to buy the Hetzel property on Apple street to build thereon a Moose Home.

PLANS TO RELIEVE SHORTAGE IN CARS

Interstate Commerce Commission Prescribes Drastic Regulations.

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Drastic
regulations designed to relieve the shortage in coal cars and help bring about a lowering of the present high
prices of coal were prescribed today
by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The regulations require return to
original owners of all coal cars as fast
as unloaded and give the railroads 10
days to devise methods for relieving
the shortage in other types of cars.

The commission's order also requires the railroads to apply the same
regulations to refrigerator, heater,
boxcar and insulated cars.

The new order becomes effective February 21. The committee which drafted the order is called on to appoint a committee to be appointed
with the commission in seeking relief
for the shortage of other types of cars.
Unless such a committee is appointed
in 10 days, the commission declares it will act independently and consider
the issuance of such orders as it deems
necessary to relieve the situation.

In issuing today's order the commission was divided. Commissioners Clark, Clemens and Hall dissenting from the majority view. The new regulations
continue in effect until May 1.

Private services at the home were attended by President Wilson, Secretary Daniels, and a limited company.
The funeral then moved to the capitol. All business in Washington

vate business in Washington stopped for one hour.

SECOND WEEK OF REVIVAL CLOSED

Several Churches Conclude Campaign; Many to Continue Services.

The second week of the simultaneous evangelistic campaign in the local churches came to a close last evening. Several of the churches
which began their revival meetings
two weeks ago will not continue the services next week. Others which began only a week ago, will continue.
Rev. G. L. C. Richardson, at the Methodist Episcopal Church, will begin the third week of his campaign on Monday.

Services at the Methodist Protestant Church will be continued next week, with the pastor, Rev. John H.
Lambertson, in charge. Rev. F. H.
Everingham preached at this church
last night.

Last night's meeting at the Methodist Episcopal Church was the most largely attended thus far in the series. It was Children's Night, 60
or more youngsters making up the chorus and singing revival songs with a vim. Owing to the interest manifested in this service, Rev. G. L. C.
Richardson announced another children's meeting on Sunday afternoon
at 3 o'clock.

Rev. Richardson also stated last night that the evangelistic campaign
would continue for another, the third week. Monday night will be designated as Men's Night; Tuesday, Women's Night; Wednesday, Family Night;
Thursday, Young People's Night;
Friday, Converts' Night. There will be community prayer meetings on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday
mornings of the week.

The cost and privileges of following
Christ were portrayed to the people
at the United Presbyterian Church
last night by Evangelist, Thomas A.
Gibson. Fifty members of the Young People's societies attended the meeting in a body last night. The choir sang another special number that was well received, "Wake the Song." Mrs.
Margaret Newcomer sang a solo,
"Somewhere." The meetings at the United Presbyterian Church will continue next week.

The meetings at the First Presbyterian Church came to a close last evening, with a service at which the attendance was the best of the series.
Rev. J. L. Prouditt expressed himself as well pleased with the campaign
conducted for two weeks. Rev. W. F.
Flaming preached an excellent sermon
last night, returning to his home in Tarentum this morning. Mrs. William Griffiths sang a solo.

Special evangelistic services, conducted by Rev. Carrie E. Willis of Lafayette, Ind., will begin at the Pewee A. M. E. Church here tomorrow.
The pastor, Rev. T. E. Wilson, has been conducting preparatory meetings
since New Year's. Mrs. Willis will preach at both morning and evening
services on Sunday.

WALKS NOT CLEANED

Last Snow Remains on Many Pavements in Business District.

Failure to clean sidewalks after the recent storm has caused protests
from many citizens. Many pavements,
even in front of business houses in the downtown district, were not swept, and the snow was allowed to harden into the ice which still lingers
the walks.

"A town which sets itself up as a third class city should certainly have pride enough to see that snow is
swept from its pavements," one man
said not long ago.

The police say that they have notified the people to clean their sidewalks, and that, further than that,
they can do nothing.

Ankle During Performance.

Miss Lottie Keffer, 17 years old, a Junior in high school, slipped as she went on the stage yesterday afternoon
in the "Dollie Dimples" performance and suffered a sprained ankle. She was a member of the "Boogie" chorus
and as she was making her entrance
one of her slippers came off, causing
her to fall in such fashion that the ankle bent under her.

Miss Keffer was removed to her
home by her father, Richard Keffer, Jr., in a taxicab. She will be unable to walk for several weeks.

Operation a Success.

Miss Martha Tibbels, who underwent an operation at St. Joseph's Hospital, Pittsburg, yesterday afternoon, is getting along nicely. Although the operation was a severe one
the patient was resting easy when relatives, who were present for the operation, left the hospital last night.

MAY ESTABLISH NORMAL SCHOOL AT MT. PLEASANT

Institute Revival Along New Lines, Is Plan of the Educators.

WILL SOON BE REOPENED

September May See Famous Institution
as Normal and Junior College Course School; Many Educators at Conference; Fayette Men Offer Their Aid.

A plan to turn the Mount Pleasant Institute into a normal school and
junior college was outlined at a meeting of 11 prominent educators at the Ryder Inn at Mount Pleasant last night. As a result of the impetus given the move for the rejuvenation
of this once famous institution, it will probably reopen next September prepared to give a complete normal
course and the first two years' work
of a college term. Superintendent S. P.
Ashe of Connellsville, Superintendent
R. K. Smith of Dunbar township
and Fayette County Superintendent of Schools, John S. Carroll, represented Fayette county.

According to the local educators,
the plan to transform the institute in-
to a normal school is a good one, for California, Indiana and other normal
schools in this section have about all
the students they can take care of and Mount Pleasant is centrally located
for an institution of this kind.

Superintendent Robert T. Shaw of Westmoreland county expressed the need of a normal school in this section. It would be the means of providing many students who have aspirations to be teachers with the means of securing the proper education close to home. The co-operation of the entire community will be necessary, he said, to bring this about.
County Superintendent John S. Carroll of Fayette agreed with Mr.
Shaw's views in the matter and said
he was willing to help all he could.

Dean Chambers of the University of Pittsburg told the educators this section needs a junior college where the first two years of college work can be given. This plan has proved popular at California Normal school, he said, and sooner or later this section
will have to have a school of that sort. Inasmuch as the Mount Pleasant Institute has buildings and grounds, he said, there is no reason
why it should not be reopened along this new line. He said it would be possible to arrange an extension
course with the University of Pittsburg.

Dr. C. D. Robertson of Pitt outlined
the junior college idea and said that he could promise the co-operation of the extension bureau of the university.

Mount Pleasant Institute discontinued its academic courses five years
ago. Of late it has confined its work
to musical courses, the lower floor of the dormitory building having been turned into a studio. It has two buildings which could be adapted to the needs of a normal school and
others might be erected on the campus. Since Dr. George M. Mich became principal about a year ago he has canvassed the state in an effort
to revive interest in the institution
and his labors are now beginning to have definite results. It is practically settled that the institute will resume academic training along new lines in September. The trustees
will meet soon to take definite action.
Many of the older residents of the Pike region were present at the Mount Pleasant Institute and they have a feeling of pride in it. Many of them, now prominent in various fields
of endeavor, have promised to cooperate in the efforts to restore the school to its former standing in the educational world.

HEN A WHOPPER

Rhode Island Red Sold by G. L. Armstrong Weighs 13 Pounds.

George L. Armstrong of Seventh street, West Side, yesterday sold four full blooded Rhode Island Reds,
weighing a total of 40 pounds, to a city
butcher for 22 cents a pound, or $8.80
for the four.

The fowls were two year old hens
and the largest weighed 13 pounds.
This is believed by Mr. Armstrong and other chicken fanciers to be a record-
breaker for a chicken of this breed.
Ordinarily Rhode Island Reds do not attain great weight although they are sturdily built fowls.

If anybody raised a larger hen of
this variety, local poultry fanciers
would like to see it.

WANTS LICENSE MONEY

Mayor Says Merchants Who Fail to Pay Up Will be Arrested.

Mayor R. Marietta this morning gave "final warning" to those who have not paid their license tax for the year. The mayor told Chief of Police B. Rottler to bring before him those who did not pay within a few days, and fines would be levied. The license tax is paid by all merchants, wholesalers and retailers, theatre owners and managers, teamsters, taxicab drivers, and others. It is due on the first of the year, but usually the payment drags on until July or later. This year the mayor says he is determined to have the license business completed early.

We over estimated the buying of the citizens of Connellsville. In our preparation of this sale we prepared 2,000 packages and we will continue the sale until all the packages are sold.

For the benefit of the few "I-Told-You-Sos," we will explain this sale. First, the goods are all new; not one piece has been in stock more than one year. The 2,000 packages cost us $1,200.00 and we are giving away $500.00 in prizes, leaving us $200.00 for advertising and running this sale. Now the "Wise Guys" are saying they are not in business for their health. We know it. We are simply turning our stock into money.

Every merchant tries to do the same thing, but use other methods. We really appreciate the business the citizens of Connellsville have given us. This is the way we show our appreciation. This is for the Doubting Thomases. The names of the persons who got the big prizes will be published the day after the sale.

The bigger our business, the smaller our prices. We wish it would grow so big we could give things away, then we'd all be happy. Community Jewelry Shop, 100-102 S. Pittsburgh St.—Adv.—20-11.

EXPECT NEAT SUM FROM THE SHOW

Committee Meets 'This Afternoon' to Go Over Finances; The Mooreheads Leave.

"Miss Dolly Dimples," the High School Alumni musical show, played to two big houses yesterday at the Colonial Theatre. The matinee audience, particularly, filled the entire theatre.

Members of the alumni's committee on the play will meet this afternoon at the high school to settle up the financial end of the affair. It seems certain that the show was a huge success and that the high school graduates will realize enough money to pay their share of the cost of the Fayette field fence and to have some money left, which will go toward the purchase of a piano for the new high school building.

The Misses Meda and Edna Moorehead, who enacted "Miss Dolly Dimples," will leave tonight for Hamilton, Ohio, where they will again produce the play. The performances yesterday were even better than the first show Thursday night.

At the afternoon performance, Fred Frisbee, appearing in his costume as "Count von Hoff," made a neat curtain speech at the close of the first act. Mr. Frisbee said that the Misses Moorehead decided that he should, for them, all who had aided them in the production of "Miss Dolly Dimples" here.

Fire Chief W. E. DeBolt and the other members of the department were on duty both afternoon and night. Just as they were on Thursday evening, to protect the children in the big choruses from all fire danger. As the youngsters in the "Tattle Tale" choruses passed from the stage to the gallery, the firemen kept them in line, and performed many other services.

A WEEK OF GOOD THINGS AT LOCAL MOVIE THEATRES

Attractions at Local Theatres Were Unusually Excellent.

BUSHMAN-BAYNE SERIAL

Francis X. and the Fair Beverly Play to Good Business at Opening of "The Great Secret", Civilization Advance Sale Is Very Good.

Many excellent films were presented at local theatres last week and business generally was good, the managers say. The advance sale of tickets for "Civilization," which comes to the Orpheum on Monday and Tuesday, indicates that the campaign of publicity for the big feature has had its results. The creation of a big name for a film is almost all of the battle in getting it big box office business. The fact that Nevada's orchestra is to play during the local engagement is another drawing card.

The handsome Francis X. Bushman and his co-star, Beverly Bayne, played a great business at the Paramount in the first installment of the serial "The Great Secret," Monday night. Framed miniatures of Francis X. Bushman, were given to the ladies. As a result, the dressing tables of many more local women contain the classic features of the "Great Bushman."

The various serials now running at the Orpheum are demonstrating their putting power with crowded houses nightly. "The World Pictures," with Alice Brady as the particular star, are immensely popular with Orpheum fans.

The Arcade has booked the K. K. S. E. service, embracing the best of the output of Klein, Lisman, Selig and Edison, together with "Unlabeled" features and the laughable "Ham and Bud" comedies.

"Pitt" Archibald has entered into a contract with the Paramount Picture Corporation, by which he will begin the production of two-reel comedies on or about March 1.

Charles Ray has just signed a new contract with Thomas H. Ince to appear in Ray Bee features for the next two years.

William Humphrey, who for the past seven years has been leading player and director in the Vitaphone organization, has been engaged by the Fox Film Production to direct several of the forthcoming photoplays.

Mary McLaren, who has been out of the blue since October 2, has returned in another Lewis Webster production, "The Mysterious Mrs. M." to be released February 3.

Miriam Cooper is the latest addition to the William Fox photoplay line, and will appear under the direction of F. A. Walsh.

Mary Pickford, the popular screen star, is recovering from an attack of grip.

Colleen Moore, a pretty Irish maid from Chicago, is a recent addition to the Triangle Fine Arts Company.

Howard Estabrook, who has won an enviable reputation on the stage and on the screen as leading man, has been engaged by Oliver Morosoff in the capacity of director and will supervise Vivian Martin's next production.

Alice Brady, in "A Hungry Heart," will be the first release from the World Film Corporation during the month of February.

Dr. William Robert Pike, an eminent Los Angeles physician, who examined 30 children a day for twelve years, while engaged in the practice of medicine in Paris, recently made an examination of Helen Marie Osborne, Balboa's little Mary Sunshine, and pronounced her the best developed child of her age he had ever seen.

THE PARAMOUNT

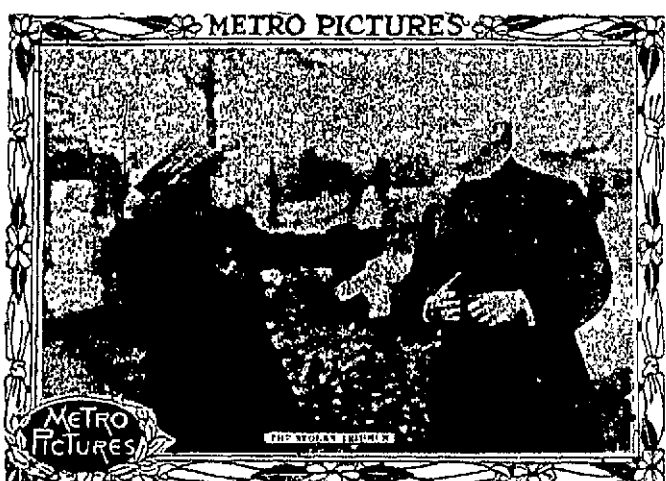

"THE STOLEN TRIUMPH"—A five-reel Metro photodrama in which Julius Steger is the featured player, will be presented Monday in addition to the first and second installments of "The Great Secret," with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in the leading roles in "The Stolen Triumph" Monday.

SCENE FROM "THE STOLEN TRIUMPH" AT PARAMOUNT MONDAY.

Steger's portrayal as the role of a playwright is excellent. A successful producer, steals the masterpiece of the struggling playwright. The latter becomes insane and jumps in the river following the death of his wife. He is thought to be a suicide, and to make reparation, the producer and his wife bring the playwright's boy into their house. While the playwright has not committed suicide his memory has been lost. Fifteen years later it is restored to him and he sees his name as the author of a successful play. His son is engaged to marry the producer's daughter. The playwright reaches the producer's home just as the guests are leaving the bridegroom and his bride in response to the toast "the bridegroom begins reciting a poem, the work, as he tells them, of his gifted father. He falters in reciting it, and the father whose memory is now completely restored, finishes it for him. The past is forgiven and the playwright spends the remainder of his life in peace and happiness.

Today William Desmond and Dorothy Dalton in a live reel Triangle drama, "A Gambler in Souls," and a two-reel Keystone comedy are the attractions.

ORPHEUM THEATRE

"THE MADNESS OF HELEN"—A five-reel World drama featuring Ethel Clayton and Carlyle Blackwell will be the attraction today. This is the most interesting and suspenseful holding story you have seen in months.

"THE WHEEL"—An imp drama with Willard H. Wilson and Edith Roberts. "Trials of a Cartoonist," a Powers cartoon comedy. Willie

Winks is a friend of our old acquaintance, Sammy Johnson. "Two Chumps and a Chump," a jungle comedy with Napoleon and Sally, his mate.

Monday, "The Sizzling Shadow," a thrilling two-reel serial featuring Grace Darmond and Ralph Kellard. Tuesday, Edna Mayo appears in the five-reel feature, "The Chaperon." Also Pearl White in "Pearl of the Army."

ORPHEUM THEATRE

"THE PRICE OF SILENCE"—William Fox presents the greatest of screen stars, William Farnum, in the thrilling and touching drama, "The Price of Silence," at this theatre today. The story is that of a Senator who has long fought the good fight to aid children in the misery entailed by child labor. His dearest friend is a Judge who, apparently, has been his sole lieutenant in the good fight. Coming in daily contact with the Judge's daughter, a very charming girl, the Senator finds himself in love with her. In the midst of the battle against child labor, the Senator discovers a hidden shame on his friend, the Judge. William Farnum plays the part of the noble Senator "Capt. Jinks Should Worry," a comedy, is also on the bill. Monday and Tuesday the attraction will be "Thomas H. Ince's million dollar spectacle 'Civilization.'" Wednesday and Thursday, Theda Bara will appear in the William Fox feature, "The Viceroy."

THE ARCADE

"LET LOVE DECIDE"—Henry Walthall and Edna Mayo, the two highest priced moving picture stars, appeared before good houses at the Arcade yesterday in "The Leading Lady." This is one of the best moving pictures ever made and tells a delightful story. It attracted many who are not regular movie fans and they were more than pleased. The high standard set by the new management of the Arcade, which is catering to the more intelligent persons of the community, has resulted in many persons attending the theatre who are not interested in the average moving picture that is slapped together because the producing company has a contract with a high priced star or company to work that week. Every Arcade picture is a combination of play and star that means perfection and is making the house one of the most popular in town.

"Let Love Decide," a three-reel imp picture, is on the bill today at the Arcade, together with "Bubbles" and "The Trials of a Cartoonist." "Ham and Bud," will also make their first appearance on the Arcade screen. The booking of these famous comedians, who are only second in popular favor to Charlie Chaplin, means that the Arcade is alive to the wishes of its patrons in the matter of comedies, and the securing of them is a decided step forward. Mabel Normand and Charlie Chaplin yesterday in "Mabel

CIVILIZATION

The most astounding, appalling picture of modern warfare that has been or can be conceived. More than one year was required for its making. Its production cost more than one million dollars. Two armies of infantry, cavalry, artillery; fleets of war vessels: battleships, aeroplanes, submarines; every other scientific death-dealing device that this century has produced were utilized to make it a battle-drama, comprehensive and convincing. Real cities were built to be destroyed. The United States navy co-operated in the staging of its sea fights. A hundred other huge, original, stunning features make it a cinema-spectacle beyond comparison or description.

SCOTSDALE, Jan. 20.—At 9:30 yesterday morning on the Old Meadow Hill car was coming into Scottdale at the corner of Fifth street the Seewickley Market truck, driven by Paul Williams, came out Fifth avenue and ran into the street car, tearing off the steps and handle on the back end. Williams was stunned for a few minutes but later drove the truck into town. The West Penn service was crippled until another car could be brought from the barn to take the place of the damaged one. Rudolph Fisher was motorman on the West Penn car.

Flying Less Exciting Than Driving a Motorcycle, British Aviator Says

By Associated Press.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Jan. 20.—"It's exciting at times, but generally speaking it's rather less sport than a motor cycle," says a "wing" subaltern of the British flying corps. He chatted while tinkering with his machine—one of the latest types in a war that is changing and developing the aeroplane almost from hour to hour. There were murmurs of the air two years ago that have no more relation to the machines of today than the clumsy attempts of a barnyard fowl to the flight of a swallow. An aerial scout that cannot register in the neighborhood of 140 miles an hour cannot be classed as truly modern. This speed is called for in "level air," not in running "down hill" or in diving out of a loop. You may attack 180 miles an hour doing that.

"Oh, yes, the fighting's fun," resumed the subaltern, "but you can't always induce the Germans to come up and have a go. They prefer most of the time to stop on the ground and get 'Archies' on you with their noisy little aeroplanes. It's when you go paddling through the air on patrol duty for four or five hours and nothing happens that flying becomes monotonous. In spite of the almost unbelievable speed at which you go you have no sense of speed whatever—nothing like the thrill of forty or fifty miles an hour in a motor with the trees whizzing by and a bumping road beneath you."

After a few more earnest remarks on the monotony of patrol work in smooth air—which he likened to driving a motor truck along a cement road in a desert—the subaltern climbed into the "cabin" of his machine. It was a wasp-like creature, with the wings and tail of a hundred horses throbbing in its wonderful engine.

Its guns were attacked unobtrusively to the frame work, and synchronized where necessary to shoot through the blades of the fast whirling propeller in front.

The "cabin" of a modern aeroplane suggests the pilot house of a palatial yacht in miniature. Everything is finished in hardwood and there are polished nickel instruments to indicate speed, height, angle and everything an airman ought to know. There are ingenious sights for the guns and range finders for bomb dropping, and a little device to tell the bombs have been properly released in turn and are hurtling on their way to the objective selected for attack.

When he is tucked away only the pilot's head is visible above the freeboard. Directly in front of him is a tiny little half moon of a windshield. "You can lower that in summer-time and get more air," grinned the subaltern.

"But what about freezing in the winter-time?" was suggested. "Oh," he replied, "that all depends upon the machine. This little scout for instance, with the engine in front of you is as warm as toast even when you are fifteen thousand feet up and the mercury has long dropped below zero. You get all the warmth of the exhaust and can stay up indefinitely. The plane with the propeller and engine in front is a tractor. The 'pusher' has engine and propeller in the rear. In one of those you get the full effect of the cold and you just naturally freeze, that's all."

The control of the fighting aeroplane has been reduced to the simplicity of a single lever, known in the profession as the "joy stick." By moving this stick a few inches one way or another and with occasional foot pressure on the rudders one can climb, dive, loop, side-slip, fall a couple of thousand feet and datten out "as right as rain." You always have one hand free for the machine at a time and use both hands for fighting. Or if the trip is a long one you can let her float while you eat luncheon. An air menu generally consists of an apple or banana, milk chocolate and biscuit, with hot tea or coffee from a vacuum bottle.

MACCABEES HAVE AN EASY VICTORY OVER BROAD FORD

Substitutes Win Out Without
Very Much Effort,
47-32.

FLINT IS THE LOCAL STAR

He Makes 20 of the Maccabees Points
Himself, Scoring as Many Field Goals Himself As Does the Remainder of the Team Combined.

The Maccabees, with three positions filled by subs, last evening defeated the Broad Ford aggregation, 47-32. Neither Struble, Bishop nor Brown were in the lineup and things went evenly for a while, Flint holding up the Maccabee end of the scoring all by himself which kept Broad Ford from walking away.

In the first half of the game Broad Ford ran along evenly with the Maccabees, first one team taking the lead and then the other. While this chase was going on, Flint, by shooting the majority of the fouls and getting a field goal when needed, kept the Maccabee score tied with that of the visitors. After the remainder of the team got into action the Maccabees went ahead and the lead ended with them six points in the lead.

At the opening of the second period the Maccabees started off fast, working signals perfectly and dropping the ball through much as they would at practice. Bartley and Rist showed up well for Broad Ford as did "Gummy" Hough. Bartley made several nice field goals and shows lots of promise in the foul shooting line. He started off well last evening but got rattled when one was called illegal because he stepped from the line before the ball went through, and he did not seem able to get into his stride again.

The Maccabee five will go to Sutersville tonight to play a return game with that team. Sutersville is a fast bunch and although defeated here by the Maccabees promise something a little different on their own door. The score:

MACCABEES—47.	B. FORD—32
Flint	forward
Goodman	forward
Miller	center
Herd	guard
Parker	guard
Field goals—Flint 9, Miller, Bartley 5, Hough 1, Goodman 3, Herd, Ford goals—Flint 11 out of 18; Bartley 8 out of 20. Referee—Wall.

The Overholt girls team defeated the South Connelville girls in the preliminary game, 8-3. With plenty of practice the South Connelville girls had developed into a much better team than on their first appearance last week. Overholt was well guarded and the ball kept covered all the time. The score:

OVERHOLT.	S. CONVILLE
A. McKay	forward
H. Walker	forward
M. Loftus	forward
H. Bisher	center
M. Bisher	guard
Field goals—McKay, H. Walker, M. Loftus, H. Sholker, Ford goals—A. McKay 2 out of 8, Sholker missed 3, Ward 1 out of 1. Substitutions—K. Murray for M. Bisher. Referee—Wall.

The Human Soul

Marriage doesn't always bring to a woman the happiness the courtship promises her. Most women enter into marriage as into a sanctuary, where love keeps a light burning, incense smoking sweet and religious, and flowers ever fresh on the altar. The red ennobled there is the husband, and the woman's eyes brighten as she gazes upon her idol and offers him the obligation of her life. Sometimes she notes the clay feet of her idol, but her love spreads blossoms about, and those ugly extremities of his are hidden even from memory. A woman has more to lose in marriage than a man; she also has more to gain. She it is that fosters the new life that marriage gives her and the state. With that little peace-offering of her love held against her breast the storms of the world pass her by. But much depends on her husband. He may make or mar the tender worship the woman pays him. He may be unfaithful and thus throw down her idol from its pedestal. He may be drunken and brutal, and thus strip himself of the golden robes her love has hung about him. Still the woman loves on and on. But what about the woman who enters marriage not because she loves but because she thinks it her duty to marry the big, brainy man, and help him to spread his name and his science through the world? Can such a woman be happy with nothing to keep her going but duty—no love for the man she married, no love for the babies that have not come? Marriage is the biggest most vital question in the world today. It's the pulse of life in "The Human Soul" the tremendously gripping play of the hour, in three acts, marriage is treated as seriously as it deserves, and not disparagingly joked about. No one should miss this play, which comes to the

GRAND OPERA HOUSE MOUNT PLEASANT, PA., ONE NIGHT, MONDAY, JAN. 22, 1917.

It will give many a husband, too much engrossed in business, an idea of what he owes the woman upon whom he has bestowed his name. It will teach many a young man to fight harder for the girl of his choice. It will instruct many a husband in the art of being a true man that love, love, love, and love, is the thing that makes marriage endurable, and the duty she owes to herself is to marry the man who loves. Remember, "The Human Soul" is not a motion picture.

Seats are now on sale at the Grand Opera House. Prices, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c.

Vegetable Calomel

Vegetable calomel, extract of the root of the old-fashioned may-apple plant, does not salivate. As a liver stimulant, it's great. It's a perfect substitute for calomel (mercury); in fact, it's better, because its action is gentle instead of severe and irritating, and it leaves no more disagreeable after-effects. Physicians recognize this and prescribe may-apple root (podyphyllum, they call it) daily.

Combined with four other standard, all-vegetable remedies, may-apple root may now be had at most any drugists in convenient sugar-coated tablet form by asking for Santalax Tablets. If you forget the name, ask for the box that has the picture of the soldier on it. These tablets are small, easy to take and are really wonderful little performers.

They quickly clean out the poisons that are causing your stomach, biliousness, dizzy spells, bad breath and coated tongue. They break gripes and they are a bowel tonic as well as a cleanser and liver regulator. A 10c box should last you several weeks. A Physician's trial package (4 doses) will be mailed you free if you write mentioning this advertisement. The Santalax Remedies Co., 502 Madison Ave., Covington, Ky.

NAN of MUSIC MOUNTAIN

By Frank H. Spearman
Author of Whispering Smith

Her uncle tried to break in. "Stop!" she exclaimed pointing at Gale. "If you told you that, did he?"

"No, nor you neither," snapped Duke honestly.

"It didn't tell you," retorted Nan, "because I've been trying to live with you here in peace among these thieves and cutthroats, and not keep you stirred up all the time. And Henry de Spain faced this big coward and protected me from him with an empty revolver! What business of yours is it when I meet, or where I go?" she demanded, raising her words with flaming eyes on her belligerent cousin.

"I will never marry you to save you from the hangman. Now leave this house," she stamped her foot. "Leave this house, and never come into it again!"

Gale, beside himself with rage, stood his ground. He poured all that he safely could of abuse on Nan's own head. She had appeared her wrath and made no attempt to retreat, only looking at him with white face and burning eyes as the breathless defiance Duke interfered. "Get out!" he said to Gale harshly. "I'll talk to her, Gale!"

"Not coming to murther on!" Gale picked up his hat and stamped out of the house, slamming the doors. Duke, reclining by the fireplace, sat down, eyes on the floor. "Now what does this mean?" he demanded hoarsely.

She tried to tell him honestly and frankly all that her acquaintance with De Spain did mean—nothing more than was necessary on its beginning, but something nothing of its development and consequences, nothing of her love for De Spain, nor of his for her? But no part of what she could say on any point she urged softened her uncle's face. His square, hard jaw from beginning to end looked like stone.

"So, he's your lover?" he said harshly when she had done.

"He wants to be your friend," returned Nan determined not to give up.

Duke looked at her uncompromisingly. "That man can't ever be my friend of mine—understand that! He can't ever marry you. If he ever tries to, so help me God, I'll kill him if I hang for it. I know his game. I know what he wants. He doesn't care a pinch of salt for you. He thinks he can hit me a blow by getting you away from me."

"Nothing could be further from the truth," exclaimed Nan hopefully.

Duke struck the table a smashing blow with his fist. "I'll show Mr. De Spain and his friends where they get off."

"Fie! Duke, if you won't listen to reason, you must listen to sense. Think of what a position you put me in. I love him for all your care of me. I love him for his attention for me and consideration of me—because he knows how to treat a woman. I know he wouldn't harm a hair on your head, for my sake, yet you talk now of bloodshed between you two. I know what your words mean—that one of you, or both of you are to be killed for a senseless feud. He will not stand up and let any man shoot him down without resistance. If you lay your blood on his head, you know it would put a stain between him and me that never could be washed out no long as we lived. If you kill him I could never stay here with you. His blood would cry out every day and night against you."

Duke's violent anger shot out at her. "And you're the girl I took from your manny and promised I'd bring up a decent woman. You've got now of her blood in you—got a drop. You're the brat of that murthering brother of mine, that was always riding horseback and showing off in town while I was weeding the tobacco beds."

Nan clasped her hands. "Don't blame me because I'm your brother's child. Blame me because I'm a woman, because I have a heart, because I want to live and see you live, and to see suspicion, distrust, feud, alarm, and worse. I'm not ungrateful to you, as you say I am. I want you to get out of here, and you are here—I want to be out of it. I'd rather be dead now than to live and die in it. And what is this anger all for? Nothing. He offers you his friendship—she could speak no further. Her uncle, with a curse, left her alone. When she arose in the early morning he had already gone away.

CHAPTER XIX.

A Try-Out.
Sleepy Cat is not so large a place that one would ordinarily have much trouble in finding a man in it. If he searched well. But Duke Morgan drove into town next morning and had to stay for three days waiting for a chance to meet De Spain. Duke was not a man to talk much when he had anything of moment to put through, and he had left home determined, before he came back, to flush for good with his enemy.

De Spain himself had been putting off for weeks every business that would bear putting off, and had been forced at length to run down to Medicine Bend to buy horses. Nan after her uncle left home—justly apprehensive of his intentions—made frantic efforts to get word to De Spain of what was impending. She could not telegraph—a possibility that she devoted would have followed at once. De Spain had expected to be back in two days. Such a letter as she could have sent would not reach him at Medicine Bend.

As it was, a distressing amount of talk did attend Duke's efforts to get track of De Spain. Sleepy Cat had but one interpretation for his troubles—and a fight. If one occurred between these two, it was conceded, would be historic in the annals of the town. His anticipation was food for all the rumors of three days of suspense. For the town they were three days of thrilling expectation; for Nan isolated, without a confidant, not knowing what to do or which way to turn, they were the three bitterest days of anxiety she had ever known.

Desperate with suspense at the close of the second day—a day for a scrap of news, yet deadening one—she saddled her pony and rode alone into Sleepy Cat after midnight to meet the train on which De Spain had told her he would return from the east. She rode straight to the hospital, instead of going to the livery barn, and leaving her horse, set supper and waited by way of unrequited streets downtown to the station to wait for the train. When the big train drew slowly, almost noiselessly, in, Nan took her place where no incoming passenger could escape her gaze and waited for De Spain. But when all the arrivals had been accounted for, he had not come.

She turned, heavy-hearted, to walk back uptown, trying to think of when she might seek some information concerning De Spain's whereabouts, when her eye fell on a man standing not ten feet away at the door of the baggage room. He was alone and seemed to be watching the changing of the engine, but Nan thought she knew him by sight. The rather long straight, black hair under the broad-brimmed hat marked the man known and hated in the gap as "the Indian." Here, she said to herself, was a chance. The Spain she recalled, spoke of no one other than this man. He seemed wholly disengaged.

Representing her nervous timidity, Nan walked over to him. "Are you Mr. Scott?" she asked abruptly.

Scott turned to her, touched his hat as if quite unaware until that moment of her existence. "Did Mr. De Spain get off this train?" she asked, as Scott acknowledged his identity.

"I guess he didn't come tonight," Nan noticed the furtive manner of his speaking and the low, even tones. "It was kind of looking for him myself."

"Is there another train tonight he could come on?"

"I don't think he will be back now before tomorrow night."

Nan, much disappointed, looked up the line and down. "I rode in this afternoon from Music Mountain especially to see him."

Scott, without commenting, smiled with understanding and encouragement, and Nan was so filled with anxiety that she welcomed a chance to talk to somebody. "I've often heard him speak of you," she ventured, searching the dark eyes, and watching the open, kindly smile characteristic of the man. Scott put his right hand out at his side. "I've ridden with that boy since he was so high."

"I know he thinks everything of you."

"I think a lot of him."

"You don't know me?" she said tentatively.

His answer concealed all that was necessary. "Not to speak to, no."

"I am Nan Morgan."

"I know your name pretty well," he explained; nothing seemed to disturb his smile.

"And I came in—because I was worried over something and wanted to see Mr. De Spain."

"He is buying horses north of Medicine Bend. The rain-storm yesterday kept him back home. I don't think you need worry much over anything though."

"I don't mean I am worrying about Mr. De Spain at Medicine Bend," explained Nan with a trace of embarrassment.

"I know what you mean," smiled Bob Scott. She regarded him questioningly. He returned her gaze reassuringly as if he was confident of his ground. "Did you pony come along all right after you left the foot-hill this afternoon?"

"Nan opened her eyes. "How did you know I came through the foothills?"

"I was over that way today. Something in the continuous smile enlightened her more than the words. "I noticed your pony went lame. You stopped to look at his foot."

"You were behind me," exclaimed Nan.

"I didn't see you," he countered prudently.

She seemed to fathom something from the expression of his face. "You couldn't have known I was coming in," she said quickly.

"No," he smiled. Her eyes seemed to invite a further confidence. "But after you started it would be a pity if any harm came to you on the road."

"You knew Uncle Duke was in town?" Scott nodded. "Do you know how I came?"

"I made a guess at it. I don't think you need worry over anything."

"Did you follow me down from the hospital tonight?"

"I was coming from my house after supper. I only kept close enough to you to be handy."

"Oh, I understand. And you are very kind. I don't know what to do now."

"Go back to the hospital for the night. I will send Henry de Spain up there just as soon as he comes to town."

"Suppose Uncle Duke sees him first. I am dreadingly afraid of that meeting."

"I'll see that he doesn't see him."

Even De Spain himself, when he came back the next night, seemed hardly able to reassure her. When she had told all her story, De Spain laughed at her fears. "I'll bring that man around, Nan, don't worry. Don't believe we shall ever fight. I may not be able to bring him around tomorrow, or next week, but I'll do it. It takes two to quarrel, you know."

"But you don't know how unreasoning Uncle Duke is when he is angry," said Nan mournfully. "He won't listen to anybody. He always would listen to me until now. Now, he says, I have come back on him, and he doesn't care what happens. Think Henry, where it would put me if either of you should kill the other. Henry, I've been thinking it all over for three days now. I see what must come. It will break both our hearts. I know, but they will be broken anyway. There is no way out. Henry—no."

"Nan, what do you mean?"

"You must give me up."

They were sitting in the hospital garden, he at the side on the bench that he called their bench. It was here he had made his unrequited avowal—here, he had afterward told her, that he began to live. "Give you up?" he echoed with gentleness. "How could I do that? You're like the morning for me, Nan. Without you there's no day, you're the light of the mountain and the life of the stars to me. I'll sicken and faint in the saddle. I'll lose my way in the hills, without you there would be no tomorrow. No matter where I am, no matter how I feel, if I think of you strength wells into my heart like a spring. I never could give you up."

He told her all would be well because it must be well, that she must trust him, that he would bring her safe through every danger and every storm if she would only stick to him. And Nan sobbing her tears one by one out on his breast put her arms around his neck and whispered that for life or death, she would stick.

It was not hard for De Spain next morning to find Duke Morgan. The difficulty was to meet him without the mob of hangers-on whose appetite had been whetted with the prospect of a death and perhaps more than one in the meeting of men whose supremacy with the gun had never been successfully disputed. It required all the diplomacy of Lefever to "pull off" a conference between the two which should not start the mob as hopeless.

De Spain Laughed at Her Fears.

because of a crowd of Duke's partisans whose presence would egg him on, in spite of everything to a combat.

But toward eleven o'clock in the morning, De Spain having been concealed like a circus performer during every minute earlier, Duke Morgan was found, alone, in a barber's hands in the Mountain house. At that moment Duke left the revolving chair and walked to the cigar stand to pay his check.

De Spain entered the shop through the rear door opening from the hotel office.

Passing with an easy step the row of barriers lined up in waiting beside their chairs, De Spain walked straight down the open aisle, behind Morgan's back. While Duke bent over the case to select a cigar, De Spain, passing, placed himself at the mountain-man's side and between him and the street window.

It was taking an advantage. De Spain was well aware, but under the circumstances he thought himself entitled to a good fight on Duke's eye.

De Spain wore an ordinary sack street suit, with no sign of a weapon about him; but none of those who considered themselves favored spectators of a long-expected encounter, felt any doubt as to his ability to put his hand on one at incomparably short notice.

There was, however, no trace of hostility or suspicion in De Spain's greeting.

"Hello, Duke Morgan," he said frankly. Morgan looked at him. His face hardened when he saw De Spain, and he involuntarily took a short step backward. De Spain, with his left hand lying carelessly on the cigar case, faced him. "I heard you wanted to see me," continued De Spain. "I want to see you. How's your back since you went home?"

Morgan eyed him with a mixture of suspicion and animosity. He took what was to him the most significant part of De Spain's greeting first and threw his response into words as short as words could be chopped. "What do you want to see me about?"

"Nothin' unpleasant, I hope," returned De Spain. "Let's sit down a minute."

"Say what you got to say."

"Well, don't you mind off, Duke. I was sorry to hear you were hurt. I've been trying to figure out how to make it easier for you to get to and from town while you are getting strong. Jetties and I both feel there's been a lot of unnecessary hard feeling between the Morgans and the company, and we want to ask you to accept this to show some of it's ended."

De Spain put his left hand into his side pocket and he drew out an unsolicited envelope to Morgan. Duke, taking the envelope, eyed it distrustfully. "What's this?" he demanded, opening it and drawing out a card.

"Something for easier riding. An annual pass for you and one over the range line between Catlabas and Sleepy Cat—with Mr. Jetties' compliments."

Like a flash, Morgan tore the card pass in two and threw it angrily to the floor. "Tell Mr. Jetties," he exclaimed violently, "to—"

The man that chanced at that moment to be lying in the nearest chair

slid quietly but imperiously out from under the razor and started with the barbers for the rear door wiping the father from one unshaven side of his face with a neck towel as he took his hasty way.

The back of the shop a fat man sitting in a chair on the high, shoe-shining platform while a negro boy polished him rose at Morgan's imprecation and tried to step over the hootback's head to the floor below. The boy, trying to get out of the way, jumped back and the fat man fell, or pretended to fall over him—for it might be seen that the man, despite his size, had lighted like a cat on his feet and was instantly half-way up to the front of the shop, exclaiming passionately but collectively at the fat man's awkwardness before De Spain had had time to reply to the insult.

The noise and confusion of the incident were considerable. Morgan was too old a fighter to look behind him at a critical moment. No man could stay he had meant to draw when he stamped the card underfoot but De Spain laid it in his eye and knew that Lefever's sudden diversion at the rear had made him hesitate, the crisis passed like a flash. "Sorry you feel that way Duke," returned De Spain, undisturbed. "It is a contrast we were glad to extend. And I want to speak to you about Nan, too."

Morgan's face was livid. "What about her?"

"She has given me permission to ask you consent in our marriage," said De Spain. "some time in the reasonable future."

It was difficult for Duke to speak at all. He was so infuriated. "You can't get my consent in just one way. He managed to say, that's by getting me!"

"Then I'm afraid I'll never get it, for I'll never 'get' you, Duke."

A torrent of oaths fell from Morgan's cracked lips. He tried to tell De Spain in his fury that he knew all about his underhand work, he called him more than one bad name, made no secret of his deadly enmity, and challenged him to end their differences then and there.

De Spain did not move. He left him again, still on the cigar case. Duke, he said, when his antagonist had exhausted his vituperation, "I wouldn't fight you anyway. You're crazy angry at me for no reason on earth. If you give me just one good reason for fighting the way you do toward me, and the way you've always acted toward me since I came up to this country, I'll fight you."

"Pull your gun," cried Morgan with an imprecation.

"I won't do it. You call me a coward. Ask these boys here in the shop whether they agree with you on that. You might as well call me an isosceles triangle. You're just crazy sore at me when I want to be friends with you. Instead of pulling my gun, Duke, I'll lay it out on the case, here, to show you that all I ask of you is to walk reason."

De Spain, reaching with his left hand under the lapel of his coat, took a Colt's revolver from his breast and laid it, the muzzle toward himself on the plate-glass top of the cigar stand. It reduced him to the necessity of a spring into Morgan for the smaller chance for his life if Morgan should draw; but De Spain was a desperate gambler in such matters even at twenty-eight, and he laid his wagers on what he could read in another's eye.

"There's more reasons than one why I shouldn't fight you," he said evenly. "Duke, you're old enough to be my father—do you realize that? What's the good of our shooting each other up?"

He asked Morgan's furious interruptions. "Who's to look after Nan when you go—as you must, before very many years? Have you ever asked yourself that? Do you want to leave her to that pack of wolves in the gap? You know, just as well as I do the gap is no place for a high-bred, educated girl like Nan Morgan. But the gap is your home and you're doing right to keep her under your roof and under your eye. Do you think I'd like to pull a trigger on a man that's been a father to Nan? Damnation, Duke, could you expect me to do it, willingly? Nan is a queen. The best in the world."

De Spain was well aware, but under the circumstances he thought himself entitled to a good fight on Duke's eye.

Duke, you'll be the first to say so. You won't shake hands with me now, I know, so I'll go. But the day will come when you will."

He covered his revolver with his left hand and replaced it under his coat. The fat man who had been leaning forward against a barber's chair ten feet from the disputants, stepped forward again lightly as a cat. "Henry," he exclaimed in a low but urgent tone, his hand extended. "Just a minute. There's a long-distance telephone call on the wire for you." He pointed to the office door. "Take the first booth, Henry. Hello Duke," he added, greeting Morgan with an extended hand, as De Spain walked back. "How are you making it, old man?"

Duke Morgan gazed at the man who had just spoken. "So I'm to interrupt your talk," continued Lefever. "But the bars at Catlabas are burning—telephone wires from there cut, too—this had to pick up the Thief River trunk line to get a message through. Makes it bad about it." Lefever polished a wire. "Duke, there's somebody yet round Catlabas that needs laughing at there? Yes?"

"No," retorted De Spain good-naturedly. "It's not fair. And some day,

When within an hour De Spain joined Nan, tense with suspense and anxiety at the hospital, she tried hard to read his news in his face.

"Have you seen him?" she asked eagerly. De Spain nodded. "What does he say?"

"Nothing very reasonable."

"Tell me all about it, Henry—everything."

She listened keenly to each word. De Spain gave her a pretty accurate résumé of the interview and Nan's apprehension grew with her hearing of it.

"I know it," she repeated with conviction. "I know him better than you know him. What shall we do?"

De Spain took both her hands. He held them against his breast and stood looking into her eyes. "When he regarded her in such a way her doubts and fears seemed men and trivial. He spoke only one word, but there was a world of confidence in his tone."

"No," retorted De Spain good-naturedly. "It's not fair. And some day,

turned his gaze, and with a little troubled laugh drew closer. "Stick, Nan," he repeated. "It will come out all right."

She paused a moment. "How can you know?"

"I know because it's got to. I talked it all over with my best friend in Medicine Bend, the other day."

"Who, Henry?"

"Whispering Smith. He laughed at your uncle's opposing us. 'Stick, Nan,' he said. 'If all the marriages opposed by old folks had been stopped, there wouldn't be young folks enough left to milk the cows.'"

"Henry, what is this report about the Calabasas barns burning?"

"The old Number One barn is gone and some of the old stages. We didn't lose any horses, and the other barns are all right. Some of our Calabasas or gap friends, probably. No matter, we'll get them all rounded up after a while. Nan. Then, some fine day, we're going to get married."
